Assignment #7: Communicating Through Adversity
Employee Layoff Notice

Subject: Important Update
Text:

Dear valued Inno Co. employees,

As you all know, these times have been difficult for Inno Co. The revenue swings and unpredictable product market in these unprecedented times have taken a toll on the company. As we inspire a company culture of grit, resilience, and determination, we must also acknowledge that these traits sometimes bring out the necessity of making tough calls.

We deeply value and care about all of our employees. No matter what salary or level on the ladder you are, it is you who makes this company special and unique. You are the body of the company, its core, its center, and without that, no one could create the great innovations we have brought to the consumer handbags market.

We would not be able to create any of these things, nor would we be able to do so in the future, without a stable, grounded company. And during such unexpected times, having had our largest sales-city hit by a category nine hurricane and then the simultaneous crash of the internet and all internet-based shopping, it will simply not be feasible for us to continue to survive as a company without making layoffs. And I must announce with sorrow that we are forced to let go of half of our dear employees, effective two months from today. Emails will be sent individually next week to let you know who will be staying with the company.

This is not a pleasant announcement to hear. And it can be easy for some to turn a blind eye to people when you see things getting difficult, but rest assured that we will be with you every step of the way. For those that we have to let go, we thank you for all the contributions you have made to the company, and we will do our very best to make this transition as smooth and as possible for you. And for those that will stay, know that making these layoffs puts us in a position where we can now lift Inno Co. back up to success and withstand the winds and waves that have been thrown at us.

Sincerely,
Hallel
